New testing rules to hamper 5G roll-out: Telecom gear makers

SURAJEET DAS GUPTA
New Delhi, 6 May

Telecom equipment makers and mobile operators are pushing for an exemption from the contentious mandatory testing and certification of all key network equipment as per the new rules that are slated to kick in from July 1.

They have told the government that these requirements will lead to a serious disruption in the supply chain for building 4G and the upcoming 5G networks and could jeopardise the latter's launch expected to take place by the end of this year.

The equipment manufacturers are demanding that the exemption from the rules given to mobile devices, smart watches, servers, smart cameras and POS machines by the ministry of electronics and information technology (MEITY) late last month should also be extended to them.

Some have even suggested a six-month extension of the deadline, pending a final decision on the rules, so that companies can procure equipment and don't face supply chain disruptions.

The Telecom Equipment Manufacturers Association (TEMA) believes that mandatory testing rules have lost their relevance and, hence, should not be imposed on telecom gear makers.

"The government is committed to removing archaic regulations. We feel that the time has come to see if mandatory testing and certification has lost relevance and should be removed, especially after the announcement of the trusted product policy, which covers all telecom products procured by TSPs (telecom service providers). For any other left over items, it can be brought under the ambit of BIS (Bureau of Indian Standards) just like the five exempted products," says N K Goyal chairman, TEMA.

Telecom equipment makers are also peeved that the Telecom Engineering Centre (TEC) has enlarged its scope of work by demanding country of origin details as well as MOUs between original equipment manufacturers (OEMs) and the applicant and other confidential information which has no relation with product regulatory compliance.

Under the new mandatory testing and certification rules, equipment like microwave, radios, routers, and so on, which can be used for both 4G and 5G networks cannot be imported or sold without being tested by earmarked third party labs and then certified by the TEC on parameters of safety, emission and other technical norms.

However, with labs are still not equipped to handle such testing, and given that their numbers are small, telcos fear that orders to buy or import network equipment will either come to a standstill or get delayed by 6-12 months.

There have been hectic discussions between stakeholders over the last few days

SIGNALLING DISCONTENT

■ Telecom gear makers are pushing for exemption from the mandatory testing and certification of equipment

■ They claim that huge delays in the testing by labs will disrupt the supply chain and jeopardise the roll-out of 5G services by the end of this year

■ They want the same exemption given to mobile devices, servers, smart watches, etc., a few days ago

■ They say the mandatory rule is irrelevant as the government's "trusted policy" takes care of it. Besides, BIS certification also exists and a committee has been set up by the department of telecommunication (DoT) to look into reforms in the testing and certification rules.

The matter came to a head after the MEITY, in an order on 27 April, exempted mobile handsets, smart watches, smart camera, servers, amongst others, from the mandatory testing and certification rules. The companies in this space had protested that their products are already being certified by the BIS on the same parameters.

Telecom companies say that operators prefer to use radios, base stations and other products which work seamlessly for both 4G and 5G networks. Says a senior telco executive:

"Now these products will also come under the July deadline. As labs are not equipped to handle them or can do so after huge delays, it might take 6-12 months before we get a certification and then apply for permission to import. With the chip and component shortage in the world due to the closure of factories in China and the impact of the Russia-Ukraine war, products earmarked for India will be sent to other markets. This will surely have an impact on the 5G rollout."

Wadia warns public of Century realty project

DEV CHATTERJEE
Mumbai, 6 May

Nusli Wadia, chairman of Wadia group of companies, issued a public notice to warn customers of Century Textiles saying the luxury housing project is being built on disputed land.

The land parcel is valued at around ₹1,800 crore to ₹ 2,000 crore with development potential of up to ₹15,000 crore.

Century Textiles, a company now managed by Kumar Mangalam Birla, chairman of the Aditya Birla group, recently sold apartments worth ₹1,000 crore in Worli, Mumbai.

The project is coming up adjacent to Bombay Dyeing's headquarters. Wadia said the statement by Century that it owns 30 acres of land in Worli is "factually incorrect, unscrupulous, fraudulent, and deceitful". The total parcel of land owned by Century is only 20 acres and not 30 acres, Wadia said in a public notice published in newspapers on Friday. The remaining 10 acres are owned by Wadia and are not available to Century for development, the notice says.

In a statement, Century Textiles said it always maintained that Birla Niyaara is part of an integrated 14-acre development and consistently

Nusli Wadia, chairman of Wadia group of companies, has filed a suit before the Small Causes court in Bombay for eviction of Century from the premises maintained in all its communication across mediums, including advertisements /news articles/brochures, etc. "Overall, Century Textiles and Industries, which independently and absolutely owns 30-plus acres of land at Worli across several locations, is planning to develop the same over a period of time after taking requisite approvals," the statement said.

The land measuring approximately 10 acres (the subject matter of advertisement) does not form part of the 30-plus acres of land and has no connection with the proposed development of 30-plus

FIGHT OVER MUMBAI LAND PARCEL

■ Wadia and Century litigating over 10 acres in Worli, Mumbai, for over a decade

■ Land parcel is worth ₹1,800 cr to ₹2,000 cr

■ Development potential of 2 mn sq. ft worth up to ₹15,000 cr

■ Wadia issues public notice that the total parcel of land owned by Century is only 20 acres and not 30 acres

■ Century denies any development on the land

acres, the statement said.

Wadia has filed a suit for eviction of Century from the premises before Small Causes court in Bombay. The court has restrained Century from dealing with the premises and structures, the notice said.

Century is misleading and cheating the public at large. The public at large is cautioned not to deal with or enter into any agreement with Century or its subsidiaries for sale/transfer and of any project (including Niyaara), Wadia said. If anyone enters into an agreement with Century then it will be at their cost, Wadia warned.

Compensate flyers if denied boarding, DGCA tells airlines

Airlines are indulging in "unfair practice" of denying boarding to passengers even when they report for their flights at the airport on time, the Directorate General of Civil Aviation has stated.

The DGCA — in an e-mail on May 2 — asked all Indian carriers to give compensation and facilities to passengers affected by such denial of boarding, failing which it would will impose financial penalties on them.

Sources alleged that Indian carriers have been overbooking their flights as Covid cases are receding, and when the number of passengers exceed the number of seats in the aircraft, the airlines do not take them on-board.

The email said, "It has come to the notice of this office that various airlines are denying boarding to passengers holding confirmed ticket on a flight, although they have presented themselves for boarding within the time specified by the airline."
